Au Revoir.

Erom Estreida's point of view the aftenamon was passing successfully. She know her power, thouch she did not understand. I have you better." he took them her power, thouch she did not in the action of view the afternoon. "I wanted to know you better." he took the was they arose to go. "We've talked together for over an hour and a heir and i feel as though I knew you less than I did when first we met this linew that here, at tea with Mr. Waddell, it was in the ascent. What else could make him forget to look at anyone except herself; what else could urge him so persistently to seek the touch of her hand beneath the edge of the tea cloth? She guessed that he had ceased to weigh his words. Experience told her that in this mood he was all hers.

"Unanted to know you better." I wanted to know the time you better." I wanted to know to the day it was within her power really to puzzle him—to pique him.

"That's because you're too fresh!" Estreida said.

It's winced at the word. It was a difficult one for a man with any dignity to swallow. Still:

"But you are refreshing," he told her and bit his lips.

"When do I see you again."

"I don't know," said she, "maybe never."

cased to weigh his words. Bapeaus told her that in this mood he was all hers.

And so she laughed at him; her challenging, round-throated laugh, her head bent back against the white of her furs; her eyes half closed and shot with little wicked lights.

A handsome young animal!" he thought again to himself. "But just what she means I don't know. Best not go too fast. She may come down on me like a ton of bricks! Orwouldn't she?"

"You puggle me," he said to her quite frankly.

"To I?" asked Estrelda, equally frank. "How?"

"To mot sure just what you do mean." M. Waddell said. "Sometimes I think you're only making fun of me."

"Well." said Estrelda, more artfully thise she knew. "I guess it worl't kill you to wonder a little!"

She wasn't subtile. She had no polish, no knowledge of the world—his world. And yet her crudeness with him passed for art, or anyway came to the same thing, for she spoke a language of the formula in this world. And yet her crudeness with him passed for art, or anyway came to the same thing, for she spoke a language of the formula for the world—his as one of her favorite herolnes would say it: "Au revoir!" said she to him.

SUNDAY, MAY 18, 1919.

Astrologers read this as rather an unfavorable day, although Mercury rules for good early in the morning. Venus dominates with evil sway. Ministers should benefit from the sway, which gives fair promise to those who place their thoughts before others. Changes in churches will be marked in the next few years, the seers declare, for startling discoveries in the occult world will modify creeds.

One of the signs of the times will be the strange uses to which ediffices once devoted to religious worship are converted.

MONDAY, MAY 19, 1919.

Although the sun rules strongly for good today, according to astrology. Jupiter, Mars and Uranus are adverse, claims for political recognition or to file applications for appointments to government office.

The situation regarding employment should greatly improve at this time, and a revival of finany lines of business is indicated.

It is a favorable planetary government for letters unless they are of a sentimental character, and these are likely to be most unfortunate.

Women come under a sway making for unrest, discontent and much entry. Not only will they suffer in the economic world for a time, but they will have disappointments in love affairs.

economic world for a time, but they will have disappointments in love affairs.

The rule of romance so strong during the war will be less powerful, it is foretold, and changes in friends, especially among those who have been abroad, will be numerous.

Venus is held to presage readjustments in families and even in communities as part of the aftermath of war, and some of these will bring severe disappointments.

During this configuration women are supposed to be exceedingly given to plotting and planning. They may be active in polities and will organize in secret ways, disguising their motives and aims, the seers declare.

It is not a lucky day for lovemaking and may be snost unfortunate for engagements. Meetings of young men and women for the first time come under a direction supposed to lead to deception and disappointment.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a year of great financial success. Travel and changes are indicated, but they may not be beneficial to the family.

Children born on this day are likely to be active and energetic, but too hasty to be neat and exact. They are of the cusp and may show Gemini characteristics.

IS SALT HANDY?

It is easy enough to keep the cattle well salted while they are still in the stables, but the time in the spring when a good many deces of work need doing all at the same time is the period when animals usually suffer from lack of salt. Salt is not a food, but it is a factor which makes it possible for the animal to assimilate food. If sait is withheld from herb-eating animals long enough they will die. The best plan is to put pieces of rock salt in hoxes accessable to the stock at all times and then let them have what they want—Farm Life.

Dress will focus much attention, ow-ing to some public agitation, it the stars are read aright. Extremes will rule once more and simplicity will be offset by extravagance.

This is not a promising sway for business affairs and some complica-tion connected with the war may have an unexpected effect, but it will be temporary.
Uranus again indicates criticism of Uranus again indicates criticism of army affairs and much unjust judgment that will arouse public sentiment. Congress comes under the malefic influence of Uranus and there is prophecy of many acrimonious debates and much legislative discord. Mars will also exert an influence that makes for combativeness, personalities and sensational incidents.

The king of England has in his horoscope a sign read as foreshadowing a period of grave and harassing cares. The conjunction of the sun and Mars in his horoscope is not completed until 1921, and it is probable that he will be disturbed by uprisings in colonies and distant parts of his empire. Ireland also will not be peaceful.

The gueen of Holland is not for-will not be peaceful.

The queen of Holland is not fortunate, for the sun is in opposition to Jupiter in her horoscope for the next four years. This may bring great charges to her.

Persons whose birthdate it is may meet many difficulties in the coming year. They should run no financial risks.

Children born on this day may be proud and extravagant. These subjects of Taurus who are on the cusp have Gemini influences.

"If Thomas Neison Page resigns as ambassador to Italy," says a New York exchange, "the United States will lose the most satisfactory ambassador it has."

Ambassador Page's proposed resignation is so viewed in many quarters; and it again calls attention to the refinishable success gained by literary men as our representatives abroad.

JULY NOT TERRIBLE.

JULY NOT TERRIBLE.

July first holds no terrors for the inaliabitants of Lithuania, for even though that oppressed little country has been under the yoke of Russia for the past century its people have managed to undertake industrial enterprises in spite of their political slavery, and among their chief manufactures are alsohol and brewed alcoholic products.

To the envious American who looks ambitiously toward Lithuania as a pleasure resort, however, it may be pointed out that Lithuania is not yet a free nation, and that until she is she will not be able to produce enough output of any product to meet her own needs. If Lithuania is given the recognition of the world as an autonomous nation, her infant industries will develop rapidly. She has already made a brave start in leather, paper, farm implements and machines, nails, horseshees, ceramics, beet sugar and olis, in addition to the brewing enterprises, all of which will prosper if Lithuania is helped politically and financially by the rest of the world.

IT'S NOT A FIRE.
